

MARCH FOR SCIENCE EARTH DAY, APRIL 22

10:30 am to 1 pm

The March for Science is an international movement, led by organizers distributed around the globe. The home march takes place in Washington D.C. and, to date over 400 satellite marches on six continents have been organized to occur simultaneously. This march is one of them.

Due to the simultaneous realization by people who value science in their lives, we understand that a call to support and safeguard the scientific community is both necessary and urgent. We champion robust public funding and publicly communicated science as a pillar of human freedom and prosperity. We unite as a diverse, nonpartisan group to call for science that upholds the common good, and for political leaders and policymakers to enact evidence-based policies in the public interest.
